Twenty-four cents out of every dollar you pay Southwestern for electric service goes to pay taxes!

About twenty-four cents out of each dollar you pay for electric service goes to pay taxes...primarily for the support of schools, city, county, state and federal governments. By contrast, only about three cents out of every dollar paid government-financed power projects that save over 20 per cent of the nation's electric power production in the last 20 years. And adoption of government-financed power projects for more of these projects.

With all levels of government needing more and more tax money for essential services, it is more than ever necessary to improve existing facilities and to cut down on those that consume taxes.

Modernized electric cooperatives, like Southwestern, are willing and able to supply all the power needed by the nation. Southwestern has plans for a five-year program of an additional 50,000,000 kw during the next three years. In addition, three more plants in other facilities. Some of this will come from the 50-megawatt plant at Woodbridge.
