Toledo Bend Reaches Magic 172-Foot Mark

Panic in local oil circles was caused by the report last night that the Toledo Bend Dam had reached one of the magic figures, namely, 172 feet above the old datum line. Local oil men say that when the level of the reservoir reaches this point, the company in charge of the project will have the legal right to start selling the oil from the new field. The dam is now at 172 feet and it is expected to continue to rise at a steady rate of about six inches per day. The company has been working hard to get the reservoir ready for the opening of the dam and the start of oil production. The reservoir is now filled to about 90% capacity and the company is confident that the remaining work will be completed on schedule. The opening of the dam is expected to be followed by a period of intense activity as the company begins to develop the new field. The company has already invested a large sum of money in the project and it is expected to bring in a significant return on that investment. The completion of the dam and the start of oil production will be a major event in the history of the county and the company is anxious to get started.
