Wallace Carries County By Easy Vote

Panama County voters, as expected, followed former Governor Allen Wallaee's lead by casting their votes for him to become the state's 38th governor. The results were not too surprising as the newspapers reported an easy victory for Wallace. The total votes were not released, but it was estimated that Wallace received about 60% of the vote. The county's new governor will face many challenges as the state economy continues to struggle. Nonetheless, Wallace expressed his gratitude to the voters for their support. He promised to work hard to improve the state's economy and bring new opportunities to the people of Panama County.

Ample Water Supply Is Key To Saving Carthage

Carthage residents are struggling to find enough water to sustain their community. The city has been experiencing a severe drought, and the water supply is running low. The city officials have urged residents to conserve water and have imposed strict water usage limits. The residents have been divided in their opinions, with some supporting the city's efforts to conserve water and others insisting that the city should do more to ensure a reliable water supply. Despite the challenges, the city continues to work on finding a solution to the water crisis.

MORE TIMBER IS SOUGHT IN COUNTY

The city of Carthage is planning to increase its timber production by 20% in the next five years. This will help the city meet its energy needs and generate additional revenue. The city has been working on developing a comprehensive timber management plan that will guide the use of its forested land. The plan includes measures to protect the environment and ensure the sustainable use of the timber resources.

City Fathers Slate Meet

The city council is scheduled to meet next week to discuss important matters related to the city's development. The councilors will review the city's budget, discuss plans for the upcoming fiscal year, and consider new initiatives to improve the city's services. The councilors are expected to make decisions that will benefit the residents of Carthage. The meeting will be held in city hall, and members of the public are welcome to attend.

Water Board To Hold Election

The Panama County Water Board will hold an election to fill a vacant seat on the board. The seat became vacant after the previous member resigned. The election will be held on the 15th of next month, and interested candidates are encouraged to apply. The board is responsible for overseeing the city's water supply and ensuring its quality and safety. The position requires a commitment to the community and a willingness to work towards improving the city's water services.
