Tax Records Should Be Saved

Time Varies Says IRS

For those who still disposed of the income tax return they filed last year, you may want to know that the Internal Revenue Service recommends keeping tax returns in a safe place for at least four years. Here are some reasons:

1. Audits: Even though IRS audits are rare, they do happen. Keeping your tax returns can help if you are audited.
2. Depreciation: If you claim depreciation on a business asset, you may need your original proof of purchase to substantiate your claim.
3. Home Office Deductions: If you deducted home office expenses, you may need your tax return to verify the amount of your deduction.
4. Medical Expenses: If you claimed medical expenses, you may need your tax return to document the amount.
5. Education Expenses: If you claimed education expenses, you may need your tax return to verify the amount.
6. Charitable Contributions: If you claimed charitable contributions, you may need your tax return to verify the amount.
