WATCHDOG FOR THE TAXPAYERS

In 1970, the House Administration Committee was called to investigate the improper cost of Congress's $3 million railroad, the Patman Road. Wright Patman, the chairman, showed the benefits of $200 million in savings and efficiencies. In 1971, Patman was back to investigate the federal government's $2.5 billion in outlays. He showed that the government was spending $2.5 billion more than it needed to. In 1972, Patman continued his investigation and showed that the government was spending $2.5 billion more than it needed to. In 1973, Patman showed that the government was spending $2.5 billion more than it needed to. In 1974, Patman showed that the government was spending $2.5 billion more than it needed to.
