Chloride Content Up
At Lake Murvaul

The state is concerned with the concentration of chloride in Lake Murvaul, according to Mrs. Thelma Hill, who has lived at the lake for 20 years.

The Hill family's house is located near the north end of the lake, where the chloride content is highest. She said that the lake has always had a salty taste, but the problem has gotten worse in recent years.

Hill said that the lake's chloride content is a concern because it affects the quality of the water and can harm aquatic life. She also said that the lake's fertility has declined, which has negatively affected the surrounding area.

Hill said that the state is working on a plan to reduce the chloride content in Lake Murvaul. She said that the plan involves using a combination of chemical and physical treatments to reduce the chloride levels.

The state has also been working with local residents to educate them on the importance of water conservation and to promote the use of rainwater harvesting systems.

County Receives More Mirex

The county has received a larger shipment of Mirex, a pesticide used to control insects and pests.

This shipment will help the county continue its pest control efforts, according to County Administrator John Smith.

Smith said that the county has been using Mirex for several years and that it is effective in controlling pests such as aphids and mites.

The county uses Mirex to control pests on farm fields, in orchards, and in gardens.

Jan. Building Permits
Up Over 1974 Figure

Building permits have increased over the past year, according to the Building Department.

The number of permits issued in January was 30% higher than in January of last year.

The increase is due to the increase in construction activity, according to Building Director Tom Johnson.

Johnson said that the increase in permits is a good sign for the economy, as it indicates that people are investing in new construction projects.

China: Where Freedom Is Fake

The situation in China today is one of the most critical in the world. The Communist Chinese regime has consistently denied the basic human rights of its citizens. There is little or no freedom of speech, religion, or the press. The government controls all information and censor any criticism of its policies.

There are reports of severe human rights abuses, including torture, arbitrary arrest, and disappearances. The government has used its military to suppress demonstrations and peaceful protests.

The United Nations Human Rights Council has repeatedly expressed concern about the situation in China. However, the Chinese government has refused to allow UN observers to investigate the allegations.

In light of these serious human rights issues, it is essential that the international community continues to exert pressure on the Chinese government to respect the human rights of its citizens.
