Commitment Vague
The United States is a democracy where the course of action is determined by the will of the people through their elected representatives. The will of the people is influenced by the necessity of the country's political system, which has evolved over time.

Foreign Aid
We must arm America in the struggle to protect democracy and our way of life. Without adequate defense, we will be in a weak position to carry out our mission. We must arm ourselves and our allies.

Sensing the News
Curbing Government
The problem of controlling government is a complex issue that requires careful consideration. The government must balance the need for control with the need for freedom. We must find a way to control government without overstepping our bounds.

Admiral's Opinion
The first layer of naval operations, Admiral Admiral, is described as the most important layer. Admiral Admiral believes that the government must be able to control the nation's military and that the military must be able to control the government.
