Moderation Needed

By holding power in balance with the power of the people, we will strengthen democracy and ensure the rights of all citizens. By the way, I would like to apologize to the readers of The Watchman for my previous comments on the subject. I stand corrected and I hope that my recent words will be more sympathetic. The Watchman is an independent voice, and I urge all of us to think carefully before making any further comments.

Discipline Lacking

A recent editorial in the New York Times highlighted the need for discipline in our schools. It seems that many students are not taking the required courses or meeting the necessary standards. Our schools need to be more rigorous in their requirements and expectations. The Watchman is committed to supporting our students and helping them to achieve their full potential.

Watery Rodeo Successful

This week's rodeo was an unexpected mixture of excitement and water. The aftermath of a storm the day before, which soaked ropes and saddles, heightened the drama. One rodeo clown was even washed away, but he managed to belly out of the water, wet but alive. The stock contractor, Ed Simons, rode a water-soaked bull and managed to stay on for the entire 8 seconds. Even the horse riding event wasn't spared, with riders struggling to maintain control of their mounts. Despite the unexpected weather, the crowd remained enthusiastic and the rodeo was a success.
