An ordinance setting building and property standards for Carthage was passed on first reading Monday night at the regular meeting of the City Council.

The ordinance, developed by the City Council's Building Committee and approved by the city commissioners, sets forth standards for new buildings and the alteration or repairing of existing buildings. The ordinance will go before the Council for final passage at the next meeting.

The ordinance, which will take effect on January 1, 1975, will be enforced by the City Building Inspector, and violation of the ordinance will result in a fine of $500 for the first offense and $1,000 for each subsequent offense.

Rodeo Queen-Miss Sherril Holmes, 13, of Hemphill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Prather, was named Miss Rodeo Queen during the rodeo at Carthage, Texas, last Saturday, becoming the 30th 13-year-old to hold the title.

Whose Canal?

It doesn't seem possible, but in a recent column Gene and Julie Reynolds, Washington, reflect on the conditions of the Panama Canal. They mention the possibility of a $5 billion canal being built in Panama. In the past, the United States had a $200 million investment in the Panama Canal, which was completed in 1914. The canal was planned by the United States to help meet the needs of its military and economic needs.

If the United States has now become a superpower, why would we need a superpower to build a $5 billion canal? Could this be a move to control the Panama Canal, which still operates under a treaty with the United States? The canal is used by about 14,000 ships each year, transporting goods worth billions of dollars. It is also a vital component in the U.S. defense strategy, as it provides easy access to the Pacific Ocean.

The Panama Canal was owned by the United States until 1940, when it was transferred to Panama under a treaty. It has been used as a symbol of American military strength, and it is a source of revenue for the Panamanian government. It is also a symbol of American power in Latin America, as it was used to control the region.

So, what is the reason for the $5 billion canal? Could it be a move to control the Panama Canal, or perhaps to control the region? Whatever the reason, it is clear that the United States is still a superpower, and it is not ready to let go of its control of the Panama Canal.
