TEC Seeks Space
For Possible Local Office

A preliminary study to determine the feasibility of establishing a full-time branch office of the Texas Employment Commission in College Station is under way, it was announced Wednesday afternoon in a meeting of the TEC's College Station Advisory Board.

R. R. Wuthrich, head of the TEC's Coastal District, met with the advisory board to discuss plans to maintain an additional full-time office in the area. He pledged the TEC's cooperation and gave a complete description of the offices already maintained in Galveston and Freeport.

Wuthrich emphasized that current studies do not guarantee a new office will be established in the area, pending a final word as soon as the latest report is received from Austin.

He said, however, that local officials are not aware of any necessity for establishment of the office if the area would be served.

He pledged that all efforts would be directed toward such an office as the advisory board felt it would be necessary.

The TEC representative said he felt the establishment of such an office was essential and that the TEC had just completed that the office would be necessary.

The advisory board met to discuss the TEC's proposal for a new office here in the area.

The board approved the recommendation of the TEC for a new office here in the area.

The TEC representative said he felt the establishment of such an office was essential and that the TEC had just completed that the office would be necessary.
