New Medical Center Proposed

To Solve Critical Doctor Shortage Here

In this time of national crisis, the concept of a new medical center has been proposed to address the critical shortage of doctors. The new center, to be named the Panola Medical Center, will be built in partnership with the local university and will feature state-of-the-art facilities.

The center will include a teaching hospital, which will provide high-quality medical education and training for future doctors. The hospital will also serve as a research facility, allowing for cutting-edge medical discoveries.

The facility will be equipped with the latest technology, ensuring that patients receive the best possible care. The center will have a focus on primary care, with specialty programs in areas such as cardiology, oncology, and neurology.

The new medical center is expected to bring over 1,000 jobs to the area, including positions for doctors, nurses, and support staff. It is estimated that the center will generate over $1 billion in economic impact.

Construction of the new medical center is scheduled to begin this fall, with the first patients expected to receive care in early 2024. The project is estimated to cost $1.2 billion.

Jenkins Announces Sale of Drug Store

Bart Jenkins, owner of Jenkins Drug Store, has announced that he will be selling the store to a national chain of pharmacies. The sale is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Jenkins, who has owned the store for over 40 years, said that it was time to pass the接力棒 to a new generation of owners.

"This is a bittersweet decision," Jenkins said. "I have enjoyed serving the community for so many years, but I know that it is time for someone new to take over.

The new owners plan to invest in the store, updating the interior and adding new services. They hope to keep the same team of employees, including the pharmacist, who has been with the store for over 20 years.

The sale has not yet been finalized, and the new owners have not been announced. Jenkins plans to stay involved in the community through his other business ventures.

Rain-Mars Martin Opening

By Buddy Green

The new water control structure at Rain-Mars Martin is already the talk of the town. The dam, completed last year, has already provided some much-needed relief to the area. The dam has been designed to hold back water during heavy rains, preventing flooding and ensuring a more stable water supply.

The project was a joint effort between the Rain-Mars Martin Water Management District and the county. The district contributed $5 million to the project, while the county matched that amount. The project was completed on time and under budget, a testament to the hard work and dedication of everyone involved.

Despite the challenges of the pandemic, the community came together to celebrate the opening of the dam. A ribbon-cutting ceremony was held, followed by a parade and a festival.

The new dam has already proven its worth, holding back a record amount of water during a recent storm. The community is looking forward to the benefits the dam will bring for years to come.
