Parking Limit Sought
By Downtown Merchants

Parking in downtown Corpus Christi might soon be restricted to two hours or less under a new proposal being considered by the Chamber of Commerce. The proposal would limit parking in the downtown area to one hour during peak hours and two hours during non-peak hours. The Chamber is expected to vote on the proposal next month. Merchants have been calling for a parking limit in order to preserve the downtown area for visitors and businesses. The proposal would not affect private parking lots, which are currently not regulated. The Chamber is expected to vote on the proposal next month.

GOP Faces November Disaster

By JOHN POSTELVAN

A new wave of gloom and concern has swept through the Republican camp as the election looms on the horizon. Historically, the party has been declared the nation's opposition bloc, and its failure to gain seats in the upcoming elections could spell disaster.

The party's leadership has been scrambling to find a solution to the growing discontent among its base. Despite their efforts, the party's poll numbers remain low, and many lawmakers are facing tight races.

The situation has been further complicated by the emergence of third-party candidates who have siphoned off crucial votes from the Republicans. The party's traditional strongholds are also showing signs of slipping away, with voters expressing frustration with the party's policies.

As the election approaches, the Republican Party must find a way to reconnect with its base and win back support. The party's leaders must address the issues that are causing concern among voters and present a clear vision for the future.

If the Republicans fail to turn things around, the consequences could be severe. The party's long history of being the nation's opposition could be in jeopardy, and the country could face a period of uncertainty as the Democratic Party asserts itself as the dominant force in American politics.
