The game requires the same level of commitment as any other. If you’re not prepared to make that commitment, you may find yourself on the sidelines. But don’t let that discourage you. There are many avenues for growth in football, even for those who don’t play. Coaching, scouting, and administrative roles can all provide opportunities for those who are willing to put in the work. So whether you’re a player, a coach, or just a fan, remember that football is all about the commitment you’re willing to make. And don’t forget to watch the game carefully. Who knows?
