Housing Funds Could Be A Boon

Some 600,000 new homes are ready for building throughout the Panola County area next year, according to the latest statistics released by the Texas Housing Association. The association reported that more than 95 per cent of the new housing units will be on the market by early January. The association further stated that the number of new homes expected to be on the market by the end of the year is more than the total number of new homes built in the county in the last ten years.

A special feature of this year's housing program is the increased number of low-cost homes available. The association reported that more than 50 per cent of the new homes will be priced below $5,000, making them accessible to a wider range of buyers. The association also noted that the increase in housing units is expected to have a positive impact on the local economy, providing jobs and income for the community.

In other news, the latest statistics on population growth in the county indicate a steady increase, with an estimated growth rate of 2.5 per cent for the year. The association is forecasting a similar growth rate for the coming year, with an expected increase of 3.5 per cent.

In conclusion, the housing boom in Panola County is expected to continue in the coming year, providing a positive outlook for the local economy and community. The association encourages interested buyers to take advantage of the new housing opportunities available, and to contact their local real estate agents for more information.
