B'ville Commission Hears Black Protest

City Marshal Accused Of Using ‘Excessive Force’

B'ville City Commissioners heard complaints Thursday night from both black and white business people who protested being treated differently.

Jeff Allen, an nothing particular for the blacks, said that the blacks were treated as if they were "a separate nation" by the commission. Allen told the commissioners that he was a member of the B'ville Urban League and had attended many meetings with the blacks.

Angry remarks were exchanged between Allen and Commissioner Bill Mosley, who called Allen a "nigger.

"The only thing you can say is that you treated us like this because we are black," Allen said.

Commissioner Mosley said that Allen was talking "dirt" and that he was not a qualified witness.

According to Mosley, Allen had been a "bloater" for years and that he had been "on the lam" for months.

"I didn't say anything," Allen said. "I just said that you treated us like we were a separate nation.

Weather

The weather during the week was mostly sunny, with occasional showers and thunderstorms. Temperatures ranged from a low of 65°F to a high of 90°F.

New Bid Taken

Cost Still Too High

A new bid for the construction of the B'ville City Hall was taken on Thursday night. The project was delayed due to high bids.

Selling Preventive Fires Tough

By Mike Reilly

The recent report by the National Fire Protection Association that fire deaths in the United States have declined by 50% over the past 50 years is a testament to the effectiveness of fire prevention efforts. However, the task of selling preventive measures to the public remains challenging. While most people agree that preventing fires is important, many are still hesitant to take the necessary steps to protect themselves and their families.

A 2019 survey by the National Fire Protection Association found that only 58% of households had installed smoke alarms, and only 43% of those had a carbon monoxide detector. This highlights the need for continued education and outreach efforts to inform people about the importance of fire prevention.

The good news is that there are many resources available to help. Local fire departments often offer fire safety workshops and educational programs. The National Fire Prevention Association also provides a wealth of information on their website, including tips on how to protect your home from fires.

Despite the challenges, it is clear that making a concerted effort to sell preventive measures will have a significant impact on reducing fire fatalities in the years to come.

Selling Preventive Fires Tough

Before this issue, I could have told you that I had a friend who was a firefighter. He was the type of person who would have been willing to risk his life to save yours. He was also the type of person who would have been willing to put his own life at risk to save mine. He was a man of few words, but his actions spoke louder than any words could ever hope to. He was a true hero, and I will always remember him fondly.

The most important tool in fighting fires is prevention. This means making sure that our homes and businesses are as safe as possible. It means making sure that our children are aware of the dangers and that they are taught to be careful. It means making sure that our communities are prepared to deal with any potential problems.

Sabine River Provides 75 Miles For Enforcement

by Jim Lawrence

Editor: "Boat it or not, never mind a year put on a boat. The law is the same. It's the same for a small boat or a big boat."

The Sabine River was discussed recently as a place for law enforcement officers to begin enforcing the law. "We have had a lot of complaints about the river being used for illegal activities," said Jim Lawrence.

Law enforcement officials have been notified by the Sabine River that they are going to begin enforcing the laws of Texas. The police force has already begun enforcing the laws of the river in the county and they are going to do their best to enforce the laws of the river in the county. They are not going to tolerate any illegal activity on the river.

The Sabine River is a state river and it is under the jurisdiction of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. Southern states are being hit hard by the national trend of increased dog and cat population. However, recent surveys have indicated that the majority of households in the southern states are still choosing to keep their pets indoors due to concerns about their safety and well-being.

In a survey conducted by the National Animal Control Association, 90% of respondents stated that they would keep their pets indoors to protect them from potential hazards such as accidents, illnesses, and predators. Furthermore, the majority of respondents reported that they believed that pet owners should be responsible for ensuring the safety and health of their pets.

The survey also revealed that the majority of respondents believed that the government should be involved in regulating the pet industry to ensure the welfare of pets. However, some respondents expressed concern about the potential for increased regulations and restrictions that could impact their ability to enjoy their pets.

Overall, the survey results indicate that there is a growing awareness of the importance of pet safety and well-being, and a strong desire for regulation to ensure that pets are protected from harm.

Sabine River Provides 75 Miles For Enforcement

The Sabine River is a popular destination for boaters and anglers, and is known for its diverse ecosystem and abundant wildlife. However, the Sabine River Authority has implemented new regulations to ensure that boaters and anglers are aware of the potential dangers and challenges of the river.

The Sabine River Authority has issued a series of guidelines to boaters and anglers, including the importance of wearing appropriate safety gear and staying alert while on the river. The authorities have alsowarned boaters and anglers to be prepared for potentially challenging conditions, including strong currents and sudden changes in water levels.

Furthermore, the Sabine River Authority has stated that boaters and anglers should be aware of the potential dangers associated with the river, including the risk of capsizing or being stranded in the river. The authorities have also advised boaters and anglers to contact the nearest authorities immediately if they become stranded or in danger.

Overall, the Sabine River Authority has taken proactive steps to ensure the safety and well-being of boaters and anglers on the Sabine River, and is urging boaters and anglers to be aware of the potential dangers and challenges associated with the river.

"It was all downhill from there." Boater graveyard is where the river meets the sea, as a boathouse begins to settle into the water, marking the beginning of the end for many of these vessels. The water is choppy, and the wind is howling, making it difficult for the boaters to navigate.

However, the boaters are determined to continue their journey, despite the challenges. They are using all of their skills and experience to make their way through the river, hoping to reach their destination before the storm becomes too much.

As they push through the rough water, the boaters are also looking out for other vessels that may be struggling. They are prepared to assist anyone in trouble, and are determined to make it through the storm together.

In the end, the boaters make it through the storm, and reach their destination. They are exhausted, but relieved that they have made it through the difficult journey.
