SALT And The MX Factor

By Dan Smith

The recent controversy over the MX (Missile-Extender) missile program has raised some important questions about the role of nuclear weapons in national defense. The MX, a new type of cruise missile, is designed to be carried on the back of a B-52 bomber and is capable of striking targets deep inside enemy territory. Proponents argue that the MX is a necessary addition to the U.S. nuclear triad, which consists of land-based missiles, submarine-launched missiles, and nuclear warheads carried on bombers. Opponents, however, argue that the MX is a mistake. They worry that the MX could lead to an arms race with the Soviet Union, and that it could undermine the stability of the current nuclear balance.

The MX issue highlights the importance of ensuring that future military hardware is designed with both effectiveness and efficiency in mind. It is crucial that we find ways to reduce the cost of developing new weapons while still maintaining their capability to strike targets. The MX program is an example of how past weapons have been developed without adequate consideration of cost or efficiency. It is essential that we learn from this experience and ensure that future weapons are designed with these factors in mind.

SHOP CARTHAGE FOR CHRISTMAS

WHY SHOULD YOU SHOP AT HOME?

1. When you shop out of town the sales tax you pay goes to that city... NOT CARTHAGE. Why should you pay for another city to prosper at your hometown’s expense.

2. The money you spend turns over 8 times before it leaves the county. This is important because if you work here, this money comes back to you in salaries etc.

3. It costs you money to go out of town to shop. Fuel costs have risen!

4. By shopping at home you reduce the chances of auto accidents due to holiday travelers and increases in traffic flow!
