The 2,000 delegates to the National Conference on Community Action in Houston recently passed a resolution demanding better living standards for achieving parity with men. Dewey’s Day was defeated in both the House and Congress and President Carter. The accord between President and Congress on legislation for the reduction of poverty was stated in the House of Representatives and the Senate by the President. The House debated for 4 hours until the Senate passed a bill containing the full $12 billion in aid to poverty-stricken areas. The Senate passed two bills - the one calling for the establishment of a program designed to help the poor - and the other calling for the establishment of a program designed to help the poor. The Senate voted 49-43 for the program. The Senate passed a bill providing $12 billion in aid to poverty-stricken areas. The Senate voted 49-43 for the program.
