New High School Is One Step Closer

The Carthage News, Carthage, Texas
Thursday, June 18, 1953

The Carthage Independent School District is one step closer to building its new high school.

The school board met this week to consider plans for the new high school. The plans were presented by architects Mathis, Salyer, and Associates, of Dallas.

The new high school will be located on the south side of the City, near the present high school. The new building will be approximately 120,000 square feet in size and will accommodate 1,200 students.

The new high school will have 24 classrooms, a gymnasium, a cafeteria, a library, and a science lab. The building will be constructed of concrete and will have a life expectancy of 50 years.

The school board is expected to approve the plans at its next meeting, which is scheduled for next Monday, June 22nd.

For more information, please contact the Carthage Independent School District at (903) 693-4141.

Washington: Curbing Its Appetite

CONFRONTATION

The government has been accused of being too hungry. The government is known for always wanting more. It seems that the government is always hungry for more power, more control, and more money. This is a problem, because it can lead to corruption and misuse of power. The government should be held accountable and its hunger for more should be limited.

The government is always seeking to expand its power and control over the people. This is a concern because it can lead to government overreach and infringement on individual freedoms. It is important to monitor and limit the government's appetite for more power.

You wouldn't think of locking up customers, so why lock up potential customers? They're always hungry for more. And there may be people in your town, in your state, even across the country! Never shut them out. Help them through the door, because they're the future of your business! They're always hungry for more. And if they're not, you're not doing your job!

In fact, you're not doing your job. When you're not helping your customers, you're not doing your job. You're not doing your job when you're not helping your customers to maximize their potential. And if you're not doing your job, you're not maximizing your potential.
