Commissioner cool to ambulance sale

Commissioner John Smith has expressed no interest in selling the ambulance to a private party. He believes the ambulance should be used for emergency situations.

This Week

Firemen set open house

The Fire Department is set to have an open house this weekend. The public is encouraged to come and see the new equipment and meet the firefighters.
Editorials ★ Columns ★ Opinions

PAC influence

The House of Representatives is set to pass the "Civil Rights Restoration Act," which would reinstate voting rights and protections for members of minority groups. The bill, which was originally introduced in 1982, has faced opposition from some members of Congress who argue that it would lead to discrimination against certain groups.

Your Social Security

Social Security is a government-funded program that provides retirement benefits to eligible individuals. The program is funded through a payroll tax and is managed by the Social Security Administration. Benefits are determined by a person's earnings history, age, and other factors.

Missile system subject of debate

Congress and the White House have both expressed concern over the missile system being developed by North Korea. The system has raised concerns about its potential to strike South Korea and Japan, and has led to increased tensions between the two countries.
