Energy board steamroller

President Carter's proposal to enlarge the Energy Department's power to regulate the pricing of energy is just one more instance of the administration's faith in big government. If the president's proposal is approved, the Energy Department will be able to dictate prices of energy to industries and consumers alike. This is a clear violation of the principle of freedom of the press, and it is a clear threat to our way of life. We must work to stop this proposal before it is too late.

You and your money

A recent report by the American Society of Civil Engineers revealed that the average American family spends more than $1,000 on energy bills each year. This is a clear indication of the need for more efficient energy use. We must work to reduce our energy consumption and save money for our families.

Mideast stonewall

The U.S. administration's policies in the Middle East are a clear example of the need for more efficient energy use. We must work to reduce our energy consumption and save money for our families.
