Newell Odell deserves support

A vote of no confidence was the occasion for the Carthage News to join in expressing its support for Newell Odell. The action of the City Council last week in calling for a vote of no confidence against Odell was a highly regrettable and unwarranted act. It is difficult to understand the motivation behind such a motion, which seems to have been prompted by a desire to weaken the authority of the mayor and his administration.

Newell Odell has served the city and its residents with dedication and integrity. His record of service is one of accomplishment and commitment to the needs of the community. It is appropriate that the citizens of Carthage should recognize and support his efforts.

Balanced budget

The city council's decision to adopt a balanced budget was commendable. It is evident that efforts were made to ensure that expenses were in line with revenues, and that a careful approach was taken in making decisions about spending.

Fellcy contemplates Righteous indignation

By Victor A. Beals

In this column, we will discuss the importance of Righteous Indignation. The concept of Righteous Indignation is rooted in the principle of justice. It is a reaction to perceived wrongs or injustices that are deemed unacceptable.

Theorists of Righteous Indignation have argued that it plays a crucial role in the maintenance of social order. It serves as a mechanism for individuals to express their moral outrage and to mobilize for action against perceived wrongdoers.

U.S. Census forms still accepted

As it nears its natural conclusion, the U.S. Census Bureau is reminding residents that while the deadline for completing the 2023 Census is fast approaching, there is still time to get the job done.

The Census is conducted every 10 years and serves as a snapshot of the nation's population, including its racial and ethnic composition, housing units, and more. The information collected from the Census is used to determine how federal funds are distributed to states and communities for various programs and services.

Residents can complete the Census online, by phone, or in person at a Census center. The Census is confidential and all responses are kept strictly confidential.
