Slow down and live

For all the problems we’ve seen from the slow down, it seems appropriate to encourage everyone to slow down. From the start of 1985, we’ve been living through a period of economic slowdown. The events of 1986 have confirmed that. We’ve seen layoffs, reduced work forces, and a sharp decline in consumer purchasing power.

While the economy may vary from one industry to another, the overall picture leaves us feeling discouraged. But we needn’t be discouraged. We can see that things are not as bad as they might appear.

We’ve seen signs of improvement in the manufacturing sector. It’s showing a return to growth after years of slow down. There’s also increased optimism in the housing market. These are encouraging signs.

We need to slow down and live. We need to enjoy the good things that are around us. We need to be thankful for what we have.

You and your money

As we look to the future, it’s important to be prepared. It’s important to be careful with our money. We need to make sure we’re spending it wisely.

The world of finance can be complex. But it doesn’t have to be. We need to take time to understand the basics. We need to know how to make smart decisions.

We need to be careful with our money. We need to be prepared.

Sensing the news

Cut through red tape

In a world that’s constantly changing, it’s important to stay informed. We need to be aware of what’s going on around us.

The news can be overwhelming. It’s hard to know what to believe. But we need to keep trying.

We need to cut through the red tape. We need to find the truth.
