Garbage, zoning on city agenda Monday

The next meeting of the Carthage Board of Aldermen will be Monday night, and a couple of agenda items will likely cause a stir among people living near the city. The first will be a report on the proposed garbage plan for the city. The second will be a discussion about zoning changes in the city limits. The report will include a breakdown of costs for the garbage plan, and the board will need to decide whether to move forward with the plan. The zoning changes will affect several properties in the city, and there has been much discussion about preserving historic elements and maintaining a certain aesthetic. The board will need to carefully consider these factors as they make their decision. For more information, please see the agenda attached to this email.

Final Turner building sold to alumni group

The Final Turner building, located on the campus of the university, has been sold to a group of alumni. The building was previously used as a dormitory, but it is currently unused. The alumni group plans to restore the building to its former glory and use it as a meeting space and event venue. The group has received much support from the university and the community, and they are excited to begin the restoration process. For more information, please see the attached article.

Editorials

Review may be in line

The daily production of a newspaper is a dedication of the professional to the community he serves: to write a good paper, a paper that will be read and appreciated by the community. The editor is a key figure in this process, as is the opinion page's role in the newspaper's overall strategy. An opinion page that is well thought out and written can have a significant impact on the newspaper's readership.

Commentary

Bureaucracy hurting colleges

We live in an age where the word 'bureaucracy' is often thrown around like a dirty word. When people talk about the negative effects of bureaucracy, they usually mean the red tape, the paperwork, the endless meetings and the lack of accountability. However, there is a more insidious kind of bureaucracy that is hurting colleges all over the country.

Broadcast ruling proper

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has ruled that broadcast stations must give equal time to political candidates. This is a proper ruling, as it ensures that all candidates have a fair chance to express their views and that the public is well informed about the candidates and their platforms.

Letter to the editor

Did you ever stop to notice how much water you use? If you have a lawn, you use a good deal of water each week. Some people have a garden and use even more. When you water your garden, you are using water that could be used for other purposes, such as washing dishes or bathing. The amount of water you use can affect the environment, and it is important to be aware of your water usage.
