County Renews Effort to Collect Whitenker Taxes

Palo Alto County has filed new legal actions in its attempt to collect delinquent excise taxes from a number of entities and individuals. This is the second time in three years that the county has taken legal action to collect delinquent taxes. The new effort is part of the county's ongoing effort to improve revenue collection and ensure that all taxpayers are paying their fair share. The county is seeking to recoup taxes owed from a variety of sources, including businesses, property owners, and others. The action also includes the recovery of interest charges that have accrued since the original tax assessments were made. This effort is anticipated to yield substantial revenue for the county, which has been facing budgetary challenges in recent years. The county has also been working with its tax collectors to streamline the process of tax collection and improve efficiency. This renewed effort to collect delinquent taxes is an important part of the county's fiscal management strategies.

The Salvadoran deportees

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service has been deporting Salvadorans, mostly women and children, who crossed into the U.S. illegally. The deportees, mainly mothers, have filed complaints against the agency for not providing proper legal representation. This has led to a movement by Salvadorans in the U.S. to protest and demand justice for the deportees. The deportees are seeking to draw attention to the plight of the children left behind, who are being denied a chance at education and development.

The grand jury: A look at what it does

By JAMES M. SMITH

A grand jury is a body of citizens called by the court to investigate a crime and consider whether there is sufficient evidence to hold the accused for trial. The grand jury is a crucial part of the criminal justice system, as it helps to ensure that only those who are truly culpable are subjected to the rigors of a trial.
