Sewer plant expansion hits state snag

The development chief for the construction firm in charge of expanding and renovating a Sewer plant has said the project is behind schedule and will require an additional $3 million in funding.

"The project has faced numerous challenges, including adverse weather conditions and delays in obtaining permits," said the project manager. "We're doing everything we can to get it back on track, but we need additional funding to complete the work as planned."
City sewer permit faces new problems in Austin

An open house will be conducted Sunday afternoon in the Austin County building in the Courthouse on the square as part of the county's efforts to get approval for a new sewer line. The meeting will be held in the small meeting room on the first floor and is being sponsored by the Austin County Improvement District and the Austin School District.

Delegation to Austin seeks industry

Elaine Shaw, director of the community development department, traveled to Austin last week to meet with state representatives and discuss the potential for new business growth in the area. She met with Senator Tom Smith and Representative Jane Doe, both of whom expressed interest in the project. They discussed potential state funding and incentives to support the development of new businesses in the area.

Health Spa campaign deadline set May 7

A pre-construction document meeting will be held on May 7th at the Chamber Building, 123 Main Street. The meeting will be open to the public and will provide an opportunity for community members to learn more about the project and provide feedback. The meeting will be led by Project Manager John Doe, who will present the project plan and answer any questions from the audience.

Postmaster warns of mail fraud

Postal Inspector Jane Smith is warning the community about a recent increase in mail fraud. She has received reports of individuals who are posing as postal employees and collecting personal information from residents. The inspector advises that residents should be cautious and verify the authenticity of any visitor who claims to be from the postal service. She also recommends that individuals keep their mailboxes locked and report any suspicious activity to the post office.

Woodstock planning committee holds meeting

The Woodstock planning committee held its regular meeting last night at the Chamber Building, 123 Main Street. The committee discussed the upcoming festival and plans to work towards making it the best festival yet. They also discussed the possibility of adding new events and attractions to the festival.

Establishment of new business incubator discussed

The Chamber of Commerce is considering the establishment of a new business incubator to support the growth of new businesses in the area. The incubator would provide resources and support for entrepreneurs looking to start a business, including office space, mentorship, and funding opportunities. The Chamber will be holding a meeting on April 1st to discuss the possibility of establishing the incubator and will present a detailed proposal at the meeting.

Shouse inks USA’s pact

By Carl D. Lemen

Shouse’s America’s Senior Tour is a great way to keep the older generation involved in the game of golf. The USGA has a history of promoting the game for all ages and this is one of its most successful programs. It provides a great opportunity for older golfers to continue playing at a high level and it helps keep the game alive for future generations.
