Just say it with a song but don’t try to sing

-E.G. come, E.G. go-

Just say it with a song but don’t try to sing

Say it with a song but don’t try to sing

The good thing about making a song is that you don’t have to say what you mean. The bad thing is that you can never be sure what you mean. But that’s okay. It’s the nature of the beast. It’s the way the world works.

I was thinking about this the other day when I heard a song on the radio. It was one of those songs where the singer is singing about how much he loves his wife. And I thought, “Wow, that’s cool.” But then I thought, “But what if he doesn’t mean it? What if he’s just singing it to get me to buy the record? What if he’s just singing it because it’s a good song and he likes it?”

And I realized that the same thing is true with everything. We say we love someone, or we say we’re sorry, or we say we’re happy, or we say we’re sad. But do we really mean it? Or are we just saying it because it’s the right thing to say?

I think the answer is somewhere in between. We do mean it, in a way. But we also know that we’re not being completely honest. And that’s okay. It’s the nature of the beast.

So just say it with a song but don’t try to sing. It’s easier that way.

Things aren’t right further south

In this article, the author discusses the challenges faced by people in the southern United States.

Really, really, really - the thing that really amazed me was the way people in the south were living. They were living in poverty. They were living in houses that were falling apart. They were living in cars that were old and broken down. And yet, they were still happy. They were still smiling. They were still singing.

It was the most amazing thing I’ve ever seen. And it really made me think about what it means to be happy. Because, in the north, we’re so used to thinking that happiness is a matter of comfort. But in the south, it’s something different. It’s a matter of attitude. It’s a matter of spirit.

I think that’s what it means to be happy. To be able to find joy in the midst of hardship. To be able to find beauty in the most unlikely places. That’s what it means to be happy.

I’m not sure if I can ever fully understand what it means to be happy. But I’m grateful to have seen it in action. It’s something that I’ll never forget.

DINING INNOCENCE

Is there anything more innocent than a child enjoying a meal? I think not. And that’s why I was so impressed by the children at the Panola County Fair. They were eating, laughing, and having a great time.

It was a great reminder of how simple happiness can be. And it was a great reminder of how much fun we can have if we just take the time to enjoy it. So, the next time you’re feeling down, remember that a simple meal can bring you joy.

TIPPRO

Gas price control urged

According to the TIPRO (Texas Independent Petroleum Association), the current high gas prices are due to the lack of competition in the market. TIPRO urges the government to take action to control the prices and ensure that consumers are not overcharged.

TIPRO believes that the government should establish a price control system to prevent gas companies from paying more than the market price. This will help ensure that consumers are not overcharged and that the market is fair.

TIPRO also suggests that the government should establish a price floor to ensure that gas companies do not sell gas below the market price. This will help ensure that gas companies are able to make a profit and that they are able to invest in new technology and infrastructure.

TIPRO believes that these measures will help to prevent gas prices from becoming too high and will help to ensure that consumers are not overcharged.
