Birdwell poses questions on shopping center lines

According to Maitz, birds had been living on the grounds of the shopping center for some time, and the birds had become accustomed to the food being thrown out by customers. The birds would congregate around the trash receptacles, waiting for the food to be discarded. The birds would then pick at the food, leaving little of it for the customers to purchase.

Maitz said that the birds had become a nuisance to the customers, who were not happy with having to deal with the birds while shopping. The birds would also bicker with each other, creating a noisy environment that was not conducive to shopping.

Maitz said that a sign would be posted in the future warning customers of the birds and the need to clean up after themselves. He also said that the birds were a health hazard and that they should not be fed by customers.

State cattle quarantine gets into eyes of Texas

By Leonard Williams

AUSTIN — The state of Texas, having legalized sale of cattle branded with Texas quarantine stamps, immediately closed a loophole in the law Friday that had allowed suspected contaminated animals to be sold.

In an effort to protect the cattle industry and the health of the state's residents, the Texas Department of Agriculture announced that it would begin enforcing the new law that requires all cattle entering Texas to be quarantined for at least 21 days. This move was prompted by a recent outbreak of bovine tuberculous that had occurred in several counties in the state.

The new law, which had been in effect since last month, mandates that all incoming cattle be held in designated quarantine facilities for a minimum of 21 days. This is to ensure that any animal carrying the disease will be isolated and not spread to other animals.

While the law is being enforced by the department, it will be up to the individual farmers and ranchers to make sure that their animals comply with the regulations. Any violation of the law could result in fines and penalties.

The enforcement of this new law is expected to be a significant step in the fight against bovine tuberculosis and other diseases that can spread among livestock populations.

Drawing the line between helping hand and hand out

By E.C. Conner, E.C. Co.

The line between helping and outright assistance is often blurry. It depends on the circumstances and the intentions of those involved.

In many cases, providing support to those in need is an admirable act. However, when assistance becomes habitual and continuous, it can become detrimental to both parties involved.

It is essential to recognize the difference between temporary aid and long-term dependency. Temporary aid is intended to help individuals reach a better economic situation, while long-term assistance can lead to a sense of entitlement and a lack of motivation to improve one's own circumstances.

White has new nickname

By T. Wheeler

The white tailed deer, a beloved symbol of the Texas landscape, has a new nickname: "T-Wheeler." This change was made in honor of the late T. Wheeler, who was a prominent member of the community and an avid deer hunter.

The nickname was introduced at a recent meeting of the local hunting club, where it was voted unanimously to honor Wheeler's memory. The club members felt that by adopting this new nickname, they could pay tribute to Wheeler's contributions to the community and his passion for hunting.

Local saddle club hosts successful horse show

The first annual Horse Show was held at the Carthage Community Center on Saturday, November 19, 2023. The event was sponsored by the local saddle club and featured a variety of horse competitions, including dressage and show jumping. The horse riders, ranging from beginners to experienced professionals, entertained the audience with their impressive skills and beautiful horses.

During the event, an auction of horse-related goods and services was held, raising funds for the club's future projects. In addition, there was a raffle where participants had the chance to win a wide range of prizes, including horse equipment, equestrian clothing, and gift certificates from local businesses.

The saddle club plans to make the horse show an annual event, aiming to attract more participants and spectators in the future. The success of this year's show has already generated excitement and anticipation for the next event, scheduled for next November.

Potlatch staff suggests local craft alliance

The Potlatch staff has suggested establishing a local craft alliance to promote and support local artisans. The idea is to create a network that can help crafters connect with potential customers and promote their products. The alliance could organize workshops, exhibitions, and sales events to showcase the craftspeople's work.

The staff members believe that this initiative would not only benefit the individual artisans but also contribute to the local economy by attracting visitors and shoppers interested in handmade goods. The alliance could also work on improving the quality and diversity of the crafts offered, ensuring that the products remain competitive in the marketplace.

Saban Riding Club

Saban Riding Club participated in the horse show, showcasing their skills and enthusiasm for equestrian activities. The club members have been practicing for months, and their dedication paid off during the competition. The event was a great opportunity for the club to demonstrate their accomplishments and build relationships within the local riding community.

Children’s deaths caused by virus

Dr. Lee Renard

A children’s hospital on the island of Sardinia and in the neighboring Tuscan region reported two cases of a new virus this week. The virus is believed to have originated in a wildlife reserve and is infecting children with mild respiratory symptoms.

Dr. W.C. Smith, head of the Sardinian Hospital’s virology lab, said, "The virus is currently under surveillance and a team of experts is working on developing a vaccine.

The virus, named Sardinian Respiratory Virus (SRV), has not yet been classified, but preliminary tests indicate it is related to the influenza virus. The symptoms include coughing, fever, and mild respiratory distress, according to Dr. Jane Ferguson, the director of respiratory and infectious diseases at the hospital.

Dr. Smith added that the hospital is taking precautions to prevent the spread of the virus, including isolating affected children and implementing strict cleaning protocols.

Several injured in rash of wrecks

Dr. John participación

Several children were injured in a series of wrecks in the Tuscan region. Authorities are investigating the cause of the accidents, which involved a group of school buses.

New country club feasibility eyed

Dr. Mary Thompson

A new country club is being eyed for the Tuscan region. The proposal was discussed at a recent meeting attended by local residents and officials.

The plan would involve the construction of a new country club on a formerly unused piece of land. The project is expected to create jobs and boost the local economy.
