Incinerator study has potential

Another route thought to be Federal

A study of the potential for incineration as a way to dispose of waste in the area is now under way. The study is being conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and is expected to take several months to complete. The study will evaluate the feasibility of incineration as a way to dispose of waste in the area and will consider the potential environmental impacts.

The study is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The results of the study will be used to determine whether incineration is a viable option for waste disposal in the area.

Editorial:

Councilman's stance not based on evidence

For more than four months the issue of dog control has been before the City Council. Initially, the council approved a trial of dog control. The trial was expected to last six months, but after that deadline, the council was expected to make a decision on permanent dog control. This councilman was not present at the first meeting of the council on this issue. However, the councilman has not said anything on the issue since that time. Therefore, it is clear that the councilman's stance on dog control is not based on evidence.

Rinkle lists control steps

By Earl Clinton

Controlling bedbugs is a major problem for the homeowner and the pest control expert. In the United States alone, bedbug infestations affect millions of people each year. Bedbugs are small brown insects that hide during the day and feed on human blood at night. They can survive without feeding for several months.

Bedbugs have become a major pest control issue due to their ability to travel long distances and their resistance to commonly used pesticides. In order to control bedbugs, homeowners need to take several steps:

-Identify the problem: Look for bedbug bites, blood stains on the mattress, and bedbug droppings. Bedbugs are typically found in corners, cracks, and crevices.
-Remove the infestation: Move all furniture and bedding out of the room and into a separate area. Place the furniture in a garage, shed, or other protected area.
-Physically remove bedbugs: Vacuum the room and throw away the bag. Use a steam cleaner to kill bedbugs in hard-to-reach areas.
-Use a bedbug killer: Apply a bedbug killer to the cracks and crevices where bedbugs are likely to hide. Follow the instructions on the product label.
-Prevent re-infestation: Keep the room clean and free of clutter. Bedbugs are attracted to clutter and clutter provides them with a place to hide.

Animal control heated topic

Commentary by Lee Smith

Animal control has been a heated topic for years. Some people believe that animals should be treated with respect and kindness, while others believe that animals should be controlled and managed for the benefit of humans. The issue is complex and involves many different factors:

-Animal welfare: Some people believe that animals are entitled to the same level of care and protection as humans. Others believe that animals should be used for human benefit, such as for meat, clothing, and research.
-Environmental impact: Animal control can have a significant impact on the environment. For example, the use of pesticides and other chemicals can harm the environment.
-Public safety: Animal control can be necessary to ensure the safety of the public. For example, rabies is a serious disease that can be transmitted to humans by infected animals.

Panola 11-12 falters as odyssey is ended

By Bob Beach

In the 11-12 division a team is all by itself a group of players, and it is often difficult to determine who is the best team in the district. However, in this district meet, the Panola team was able to overcome the odds and win the championship.

The Panola team was led by senior captain Kevin Smith, who scored 25 points in the championship game. Smith was joined on the court by senior guard John Adams, who scored 15 points, and junior forward Tim Brown, who scored 10 points.

The Panola team was able to overcome the odds and win the championship.

TUGCO suspends some lignite royalty

By Mike Walker

Representatives from the company have informed the Post that lignite royalty payments will be suspended immediately.

"The reason for suspending these payments is due to the current market conditions and the financial situation of the company," an official from TUGCO said. "We have made this decision in the best interest of our shareholders and stakeholders." This decision will affect lignite royalties paid to landowners and mining operations throughout the region.

Rodeo winds up Saturday

By Kathy James

The Panola County Post rodeo conclude its final night of competition Saturday with the clanging of the arena bell. Spectators lined the stands, watching as the cowboys and cowgirls gave their all in pursuit of the $27,000 in prize money.

The rodeo featured events such as bronc riding, calf roping, and bull riding. Highlights included the stunningly timed 8.3-second effort of the bull rider, who managed to dismount the rampaging animal before it could inflict any harm.

Mineral taxes drop reduced

By Mike Miller

The Panola County Board of Commissioners announced Tuesday that it was reducing the mineral tax rate from 2% to 1.5% for 2023. The reduction will help ease the burden on mineral owners and companies operating in the county, as well as encourage new investment.

City’s budget squeeze tightens

By Bill Jordan

Mayor Tom Jones addressed the City Council last week, outlining the city’s budget difficulties and the need for cost savings and increased efficiency.

"Our financial situation is getting tighter," the mayor said. "We need to make some tough decisions to ensure the city’s long-term viability." Jones emphasized the need to review all city departments to identify areas where efficiency can be improved.

New Beckville offices nearing completion

By Louisa Thompson

Construction has been moving ahead steadily at the new offices in Beckville. The project is set to be completed in the next few months, providing much-needed space for city staff and increasing the city’s visibility in the community.

The city council has been working closely with the construction team to ensure that the new offices meet all the requirements. stump Joe Franklin was on site last week, overseeing the final stages of the project.
