A LOOK AT PERSONALITIES, HERITAGE AND LIFESTYLES IN OUR COMMUNITY

Panola’s heritage etched in stone

As we travel through the county and visit cemeteries, we are reminded of the people and history of our community. Gravestones are a historical record inscribed on a stone slab or monument erected above the ground to commemorate a person who has died. They are a visible representation of the past and serve as a reminder of the lives lived and contributions made by those who have passed.

In Panola County, we can find examples of gravestones that tell stories of the lives of our ancestors. These stones often bear inscriptions that provide insight into the families, occupations, and beliefs of the deceased. They are a testament to the rich heritage and culture of our community.

Although the county’s original settlers were primarily from Tennessee and the Southern states, it is believed that the majority of the county was occupied by the Creek Indians until the 1720s. The first white settlers arrived in the late 18th century and the early 19th century. The first cemetery in the county is believed to be the Old Union Cemetery, which was established in the late 1800s.

Today, Panola County has a rich tradition of cemeteries, each with its own history and stories. The cemetery at the Panola County School, for example, is a historic site that has been in continuous use since the 1920s. It is a place of remembrance for many families and a reminder of the sacrifices made by those who have gone before us.

As we look at the gravestones in Panola County, we are reminded of the importance of preserving our history and honoring those who have contributed to the development of our community. Through the years, the county has been a place of growth and change, and the cemeteries are a testament to the lives of those who have helped shape our present.

METEORS SHOWER THE SKY WITH THE SIGNS OF GOD’S WONDERS

The falling exhibition of a shower of meteoric stones is often associated with celestial events of spiritual interest. Some people enjoy watching these phenomena and believe they can impact their lives. One such event occurred in the year 1054 AD, when a large number of meteors were observed showering down from the sky, creating a stunning display of light. These meteors were visible for several hours and were accompanied by a bright flash of light in the sky. The event was observed by many people and was recorded in various historical texts.
