Those old oak floors used to be some fun

Editorial:
Several hopeful signs show discipline on rise

For those who wonder what happened to discipline in our schools, several hopeful signs are showing up. Perhaps the most surprising of all was the video that was shown last week at a meeting of the local school board. The video showed scenes from a recent school assembly where a group of students were busily using their cell phones and texting instead of paying attention. The principal of the school then walked into the room and calmly took each of the phones from the students, causing a shock wave of surprise and confusion. The students were then forced to sit in the assembly hall for several hours, learning about the importance of discipline and the consequences of using technology during school time.

God's Love Lights The Fire
In The Colors Of Autumn

By light of the departing sun we find
The heart of autumn has been kind.
And kindly lights as we behold
The hues enacting flaring red and gold.
Before their brilliant colors burn to brown,
And yet, determined to mind, soon Big Black
I'll watch them burn to droop completely bare.
And paint autumn borders like the air.
It's harvest time in every farmer's life!
When crops that feed the heart and soul with fruit
Are gathered from the ground and fall the line.
As for the pittiness, why, Winter will come as usual.
The season will end with a bang of corn.
This season the love of God has planned.
When autumn's living colors paint the best.
