Choosing child's birthdate was happy Augury

The mother moves on. Good news of the world for and of Merry Christmas. A secret role of the child chosen... As the snow fell in the early morning hours of Christmas Day, the streets were filled with the sound of children laughing and playing. The joy of the season was evident on every face.

The Christmas tree was bright with lights. The candles flickered, casting a warm glow throughout the room. The aroma of pine filled the air, mingling with the delicious fragrance of home-cooked meals.

The first gift was opened, revealing a cherished toy. The child's eyes sparkled with excitement as they explored each new item. The family gathered around, sharing stories and memories.

Editorial:

City looking better but work must go on

Down town College street is looking better with the completion of the front of the post office making the square's southern portion a beautiful scene. The downtown merchants are pleased with the improvements but much work is needed to make the entire city look better.

The City Council is in the process of sending out a request for proposals for downtown improvements. The city is looking for a consultant to help plan and design the improvements.

The City Council is also considering the possibility of creating a beautification committee to oversee the improvements. This committee would be made up of local residents and business owners who are interested in improving the downtown area.
