State comptroller refunding overpayment

State comptroller Ben Nelson announced that he has sent letters to people who have overpaid their taxes.

The letters are asking for the money to be returned.

"This is a very important step in the process," said Nelson.

He added that the letters were sent out in response to a request made by the Department of Revenue.

The department said that it had found instances of people who had paid more than they owed.

Nelson said that he hopes the letters will encourage those who owe money to come forward and hand it in.

"We want to make sure that everyone is paying the right amount," he said.

The letters include information about how to make the payments and the process for doing so.

"We are committed to making sure that everyone is paying the right amount," Nelson said.

He added that the department is working on a plan to make it easier for people to pay their taxes.

Cleaning out drawers can yield interesting surprise

If you're like most people, you have drawers filled with old papers, junk, and other items that you never really use. But did you know that these drawers can actually yield some interesting items? Here's how!

First, clear out the drawers and sort through the items. You might be surprised at what you find. Look for old letters, photos, and other mementos that you might have forgotten about.

Next, take the time to read through any old letters or documents you find. You might learn something new about your family history, or find a treasure that you never knew you had.

It's also a good idea to sort through old clothing. You might find some old favorites, or even some items that you can donate to charity.

So next time you're cleaning out your drawers, remember to take the time to sort through and read through the items. You might be surprised at what you find!

Collector contrasts memorabilia, war games

By John Gorman

For many years, Dean Jones, has been very involved in the hobby of collecting memorabilia, especially Coca-Cola memorabilia. His collection is quite extensive and includes everything from small pins to large signs. He is known as a true expert in the field and his collection is considered one of the best in the world.

The collection includes a wide variety of items, ranging from early paper and bottles to more recent items. One of the most prized items in the collection is a Coca-Cola machine from the 1930s. The machine is in excellent condition and is considered one of the rarest items in the collection.

In addition to his Coca-Cola memorabilia, Dean also collects war games and other military items. He is particularly interested in World War II and the Pacific Theater. He has traveled extensively to Japan and other Pacific islands to research and collect items related to this period.

Dean has also written several books on his collection and has given numerous talks and presentations. He is a member of several organizations dedicated to collecting memorabilia and has served as a judge at several national shows.

Although Dean has a busy schedule, he finds time to enjoy his hobbies in his free time. His collection is not only a source of pride, but also a way to relax and unwind. He enjoys sharing his knowledge and passion for collecting with others and often invites people to his home to see his collection.

Dean believes that collecting is a lifelong passion that can bring immense satisfaction and joy. He encourages others to pursue their own interests and hobbies, and to find the joy and fulfillment that can come from them. His collection is a testament to his dedication and commitment to his passion, and serves as an inspiration to others who may be considering collecting as a hobby.

Odd tree sheds splendor as weather vacillates

By Rob Green

As the tree slowly sheds its leaves, the weather vacillates between sunny days and rainy nights. The tree, which was planted in the summer of 1985, has been a source of delight for the community ever since.

The tree was designed by landscape architect John Taylor and planted by local volunteers. The tree was originally intended to be a象征 of the community's commitment to environmental conservation.
