Editorial:

Waste not, want not

There are times, in the management of a business, when efficiency will not necessarily stand in the way of increased profit. And just when it seems that it is one more aspect of local government which has both wasted public dollars and pulled a long face at the taxpayers, the news is out that the government is about to pass a new tax. Now that is not good news for anyone who has to pay the taxes, but it is good news for the government, which just received a tax revenue which has outstripped even the most optimistic of expectations.

TALK-Line

Some of the comments that I've heard are that the new tax will be a benefit to the local community. However, I would like to point out that the new tax will not be a benefit to the local community if it is not used wisely. The new tax will be a benefit to the government if it is used wisely. The government should be careful not to overspend and that the new tax will be a benefit to the local community if it is used wisely.
