Valentine legends have varied roots

The essence of Valentine Day, though popular and well-accepted, has evolved from various origins. Its earliest recorded history is connected to Roman mythology, particularly the story of Romulus and Remus. Valentine became a symbol of love and romance, especially due to a legend originating from a monk named Valentine. The story of Valentine’s Day is said to have been inspired by the love of a Roman soldier for a Christian girl, which eventually led to his execution.

Valentine’s Day has also been associated with the saint known as St. Valentine, who was a Christian priest in the Roman Empire. In the 5th century, Pope Gelasius I declared Valentine’s Day on February 14th as a day of celebration. The exact reasons for this association are unclear, but it is believed that the date was chosen to honor the memory of Valentine.

Ponies crush Cardinals in Texas Eastern action

By TED LEACH

Panola College's Spencer Leach scored career high 19 points Tuesday night to lead the Ponies over the Cardinal Carlsbad High School 66-34. The Ponies improved their record to 20-5 overall, 10-2 in conference play. Leach's three-point play in the third quarter was the start of the Ponies' 25-2 run over the Packard's in the final five minutes. Leach had 19 markers, 11 rebounds, and five assists. He made 6-11 field goals and was 3-5 from the free-throw line. Leach also made 2-3 from beyond the arc. Leach was the only Pony player to reach double digits in points.

Spencer has 'em scared
Zebras intimidated

by Ted Leach

It was a bad night for the Ponies because they had to play against the TEC defending champs, who are ranked second in the state. The Ponies were well trained but the Zebras were well-trained too. The Ponies had the upper hand only because they had better balance. The Zebras had the upper hand only because they had better balance.

Spencer

The Bulldogs turned in a strong performance against Carthage in the third period, thanks in part to the efforts of Spencer. He scored a total of 20 points and pulled down 15 rebounds. Carthage was able to manage only 8 points in the third quarter, while Spencer took advantage of his opportunities. His play helped secure the victory for Carthage, who edged out Spencer by a score of 58-46. After this game, Carthage can now focus on preparing for the playoffs, with their sights set on a deep run.
