CHS students clean up Grand Bluff Cemetery

By Earl Chamber

As part of their annual project for community service, a number of CHS students in the AP Biology class worked hard to clean up the Grand Bluff Cemetery located in the town of Pascagoula.

The students, along with members of the CHS Drama Club, spent several hours clearing overgrown vegetation and weeds from the gravesites. They also painted and repaired headstones and helped to maintain the overall appearance of the cemetery.

"It was a meaningful way for us to contribute to our community," said one of the students. "We feel good about helping to keep this historic site looking its best for future generations."

The cemetery, which dates back to the mid-1800s, is an important quiet haven for rest and reflection. "It's a place that belongs to the people of this town," said another student. "We want to make sure it's here for everyone to enjoy."

Local businesses also supported the project. "We were honored to be able to help," said the owner of a nearby bakery. "This cemetery is a part of our town's heritage, and we want to do what we can to help preserve it."

The students' efforts have already paid off, with the cemetery looking fresh and tidy. "We hope others will see the difference and feel encouraged to contribute as well," said one of the teachers. "This is a great example of how we can all work together to make our community a better place."

Yearbook breathes down in a steady march of highway legislation that has been the focus of the Highway Safety Improvement Council this year. The council has been active in promoting safety measures and legislation to improve highway safety throughout the state.

One of the major achievements of the council this year has been the passage of a bill that establishes a new fund for highway safety improvements. The bill, introduced by Senator John Smith, has been widely supported by community leaders and organizations dedicated to highway safety.

The council has also been working closely with state and local officials to implement the new fund, which will provide funding for a variety of safety initiatives, including road improvements, traffic control devices, and emergency response capabilities.

In addition to the fund, the council has been involved in a number of other initiatives to enhance highway safety, including the development of a comprehensive traffic safety education program for schools and the promotion of pedestrian and bicycle safety measures.

Chairperson Mary Johnson, president of the council, has praised the efforts of the council and its partners in promoting highway safety.

"We are pleased with the progress we have made this year," Johnson said. "Our goal is to continue to work towards a safer highway system for all Californians."
