Local youth in "hog heaven" at Houston Livestock Show

Riding their grosses and making a killing at the Houston Livestock Show was a group of young people from the area. The Houston Livestock Show is known for its youth and junior events, but this year it was the kids who really took center stage.

The youth, ranging in age from 12 to 18, were from various farms and ranches in the area. They had been preparing for this event for months, and their hard work paid off.

The show featured a variety of livestock, including hogs, cattle, and sheep. The kids were judged on their knowledge of animal care and handling, as well as their presentation skills.

The biggest winner of the day was a hog that was sold for $30,000. The buyer was a major corporation that wanted to use the hog for research purposes.

The youth were thrilled with their success and were already planning for next year's show.

E. C. come, E. C. go

"Yeah still sounds like a cuss word to me"

By Edward Chevrolet

I never really wanted to see the day when I would have to become a cuss word. I was one of the few people who said that "E. C. come, E. C. go" was not a cuss word. I always felt that it was a term of endearment for a close friend or family member. However, in recent times, I have noticed that people are using it more frequently, and it seems to be more accepted these days. I guess that's the way it goes when you are no longer considered "cool".

In Texas' fight for independence many lives and homes were sacrificed, but can you imagine losing your entire town because of a case of mistaken identity?

On the morning of March 26, 1836, a cloud of dust was spotted on the horizon. Col. Felipe de Alcuin, the Mexican cavalry officer, led a force of soldiers to the small town of Chupadero. They believed it was a Mexican bandit, but it was actually a group of Texas volunteers.

The battle was brief but intense. The Americans, led by Capt. John Cooper, fought bravely but were ultimately defeated. The town of Chupadero was destroyed, and its inhabitants were killed or captured.

The incident was just one of many during the Texas Revolution. The people of Texas fought against Mexican rule, and their sacrifice was not in vain. They ultimately gained their independence and established the state of Texas.

Beckville science students participate in project

Kite design, history discussed

By Paul Chesher

A Daedalian figure flitting through the sky was the sight that greeted students of the Beckville High School science classes at their first meeting. The class is the first in a series of special activities planned by the Beckville science department.

The Daedalian figure was a kite, and the students were to be the kite flyers. The purpose of the activity is to introduce students to the history and design of kites.

The first meeting was held in the library, where the students were given a brief history of kites. The history of kites dates back to ancient China, where kites were used for religious purposes and as a means of communication.

The students were then shown how to design and construct kites. They were given a list of materials and instructions on how to assemble the kites.

The students were divided into groups and were given a period of time to design their kites. The kites were then flown in the gymnasium.

The students were encouraged to be creative in their designs. Many of the kites were quite unique and incorporated a variety of shapes and colors.

The first meeting was a success, and the students are looking forward to the next meeting.
