Thank You

Perhaps you saw a lovely card
Sent quietly in a thing
A note of thanks to your heart
If we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words
As any friend could say:
Perhaps you were not there at all
Just thought of us that day.

Whatever you did to warm our hearts
We thank you from the bottom
Of our hearts.

Fire blight symptoms on pear varieties

By ALAN C. CORY

County Extension Agent

Fire blight symptoms are rare on pears in this area, but when found, it is a destructive disease. Pears are susceptible to fire blight at any stage of growth. Young fruit is the most susceptible to fire blight. Fire blight will develop where open wounds, pruning cuts, and other breaks in the protective surface of the tree occur. Fire blight is caused by the bacteria Erwinia amylovora and is spread by wind, rain splashes, and insects. Nematodes and other parasites may also spread fire blight. Fire blight is a serious disease because it can negatively impact pear production. Fire blight is difficult to control and can cause significant losses to pear growers.
