Water wells examined

By Panola Watchman

The average person is surprised when they hear the term "water well," but for many residents in the Panola County area, it is a crucial part of their daily lives. A water well provides a source of clean, safe drinking water that is free from contaminated water. The Panola County Health Department has discovered that the water level varies throughout the county due to the unique geological features of the area. The department encourages residents to have their wells tested to ensure that the water is safe to drink.

EDITORIAL

You've come a long way

Working women of Panola County have come a long way in the last few decades. They are the backbone of the local economy, and their contributions are not to be taken lightly.

The growth of the female workforce has been driven by a combination of factors, including increased educational opportunities, changes in societal attitudes, and the need for workers in a growing economy. Women have entered a wide range of fields, from traditionally male-dominated industries like construction and manufacturing to fields that were once considered predominantly female, such as nursing and education.

Despite these advances, women still face challenges in the workplace. Gender discrimination and pay disparities are still prevalent in many industries, and women often have to balance work and family responsibilities in ways that are not always easy.

Wildlife rescued, cared for

BY CHARLOTTE GABER
MONTGOMERY

The creatures of earth, and the waters that cover them, are to be feared, and he that doeth wrong shall fall by the sword. This is a remembrance for all of us to work together for the preservation of wildlife. The Panola Wildlife Rescue is located near Hayes. It is a place where injured and sick wildlife can be cared for until they are ready to be released into the wild. The main goal of the rescue is to help injured animals return to their natural habitats.

Lumber, oil chilling economy

If there is an area in the state that has shut down tight, halted and partially run down, it is the lumber and oil industry. The season is well under way, and it has been made public that both industries are in a bad way. The lumber companies are working at reduced capacity, and the oil companies are working at reduced capacity as well.

Gallonary News

By Mrs. Cissie Baker

This is a bountiful time...the first light of spring makes its presence felt, the weather is warming up, and the world is coming to life. It's hard not to be in a good mood during this time. Every little thing seems to bring a smile to your face. School doors swing wide open and young minds bursting with curiosity are eager to learn new things. It's a magical time...a time of hope and promise.

Our garden has been left fallow for an entire winter, so there is much weeding and tending to do before we can move on to planting. The seedlings are doing well, but we still have some work to do. I've been tending to the garden every day, pouring over catalogs and deciding what we need for the season. We've got to get a move on if we want to be ready for the warmer weather. We're on track, but we still have a lot to do.

I hope everyone is having a good first week of spring. How are your gardens doing? What have you been planting? How do you like it so far? If you need any advice or tips, I'd be happy to help. Let's talk gardening!

Oil and gas news

Good natural gas and condensate production from the Caine Field has been reported at the Permian Oil and Gas Show. The field is located in the heart of the Permian Basin and is one of the most prolific plays in the United States.

The oil and gas industry is experiencing a boom due to advances in technology and the rise in energy demands. The Permian Basin is the largest continuous oil and gas producing area in the United States and is expected to continue to grow.

In other news, the Texas Railroad Commission has announced new regulations to improve safety and environmental standards in the oil and gas industry. The new regulations will require companies to implement more rigorous monitoring and reporting practices.

Read the full story in this week's issue of the Permian Oil and Gas Journal.
