Editorial

Our teenagers work harder

The cartoon on this page depicts teenagers at work on a summer job. Panola Newspaper uses this frame to address current events and problems related to the everyday life of a teenager.

The newspaper probably had in most teenagers in the high school and not those in Carthage who are known to work hard and appreciate the opportunities presented them.

The age of a person matters very little when he or she is contributing to the community by being a hard worker. The wages they earn are returned to the community.

One of the most valuable become a young person can learn is the value of hard work. Factors are not made (usually) by inheritance but by working. Publishers cannot publish without hard work. Young people generally know the value of hard work and should be considered "hard labor," but few adults "fellow" persons would want to have to do their jobs.

One of the priceless things that can be taught to your children is the opportunity to work where you want to and to take your future in your own hands and take independence for the best time.

Young people who spend their summers working in the community are to be commended. Their contribution to the community many times over for the investment of time and money training them.

Panola Newspapers encourages our young people to work in the community and not to encourage employers to invest in the future of Panola County by hiring young people for the summer months.
