More Texas bank failures seen

STATE CAPITAL
HIGHLIGHTS

In Dallas, the state's leading central bank, the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, reported that the number of Texas banks failing or being taken over by other institutions has increased significantly since the beginning of the year.

In Houston, the state's most populous city, the number of banks failing or being taken over has also increased.

In Austin, the state's capital city, the number of banks failing or being taken over has remained relatively stable.

The increased number of bank failures and takeovers is being attributed to the ongoing economic downturn and the high level of non-performing loans on the books of many banks.

In the past month, the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas reported that the number of banks failing or being taken over in Texas had increased by 50% compared to the same period last year.

The increased number of failures and takeovers has raised concerns about the stability of the state's banking system and the potential for a wider economic impact.

We deliver a lot more than just NEWSPAPERS

Some publications only think about circulation simply as "numbers." To us, circulation means people—real people who read and trust our local news and keep us informed about the things that affect their lives and their future. We provide them with meaningful features. We amuse them and amaze them, we make them laugh and sometimes even cry. We make them think. And we tell them where the best buys can be found through the ads and we help them sell all kinds of goods and services. We deliver a lot more than just newspapers. We deliver it ALL!

Consumers cautious of food irradiation

In a recent study, Americans have been advised by the US Department of Agriculture to avoid eating irradiated foods.

Irradiation is a process that uses radiation to kill or deactivate microbes, such as bacteria and viruses, and to extend the shelf life of food products. However, this technique has recently come under scrutiny due to concerns about its safety.

The study, conducted by the US Department of Agriculture, found that irradiation can affect the nutritional value of food, leading to the loss of vitamins and minerals. In addition, some concerns have been raised about the potential for irradiation to cause health risks.

As a result, consumers are being advised to carefully read food labels and choose products that are not irradiated, when ever possible.

S苇yholders caution food irradiation

In the last few years, Americans have not been as cautious about food irradiation as they could be. This is because there is a lack of understanding about the benefits and potential risks of irradiation.

Food irradiation is a process that uses high-energy radiation to kill bacteria and other microorganisms in food, making it safer to eat. It is a common practice in the United States and other countries around the world.

However, some people are concerned about the potential long-term effects of irradiation, such as the possibility of altering the food's nutritional value or creating new harmful substances. It is important to conduct more research on these potential risks before making a decision on whether or not to use irradiation.

Wagon train nears finale

Throughout Texas history, Fort Worth has been known as a city of horsemanship. As early as 1820, a wagon train moved into the area, bringing supplies and settlers to the frontier. The train operated for 120 miles between the Trinity River and the Red River. The train was composed of 100 wagons, each carrying an average of 1,000 pounds of freight per wagon. The train was led by Captain John C. Young, who became known as the "Father of Fort Worth." The train transported goods such as lumber, farm equipment, and livestock to the settlement. The train was a significant event in the history of Fort Worth, marking the beginning of the city's growth.

Extension service gets grants for bluegill programs

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service is working hard to support Texas farmers. The agency has recently received several grants to fund bluegill programs. The grants will be used to purchase new equipment and train volunteers to help with the programs. The programs are designed to help farmers manage their bluegill populations and improve the health of their crops. The Extension Service will also use the funds to conduct research on bluegill populations and develop new management strategies.

Yarbrough re-elected

Former Governor Bob Cenard, who was re-elected as a business partner in a local law firm, has been elected to the Dallas County Democratic Committee. Cenard, who was a candidate for the Democratic nomination in the 2022 election, has been a prominent leader in the Texas Democratic Party. As the state's attorney general, he helped establish the Texas Democratic Convention. Yarbrough stated that the Democrats were a "powerful" force in the state, and that he was looking forward to working with the new committee.

Sweepstakes

Texas-based companies are known for their generous sweepstakes. Some of the major companies in the state are sponsoring sweepstakes to give away prizes such as cars, trips, and cash. The sweepstakes are a popular way for companies to promote their products and services. To enter the sweepstakes, participants can visit the company's website or submit their entries in person. The winners are chosen randomly, and the prizes are awarded to those who are selected.

PJC sets computer camps

Pine Junt College will sponsor two computer camps for kids, grades 6-12, this summer. A week-long day camp will be held June 27-July 1 and a two-week day camp will be held June 27-July 8. The registration fee is $150 for one week and $275 for two weeks. The computer camp is designed to teach children within any computer language, including C++, FORTRAN, BASIC, PROLOG, Smalltalk, and other languages. Each camper will receive a comprehensive and hand-on experience in a computer laboratory. The interaction with the staff and computer lab can offer a great opportunity to learn and enjoy the computer. The internship level course is designed for students who have had one year of programming experience, either in a classroom of pre-high school. The summer course is two weeks long and is designed for programming skills. Students will receive hands-on experience in a computer laboratory. The registration fee is $275 for the two-week course and $365 for the six-week course. Resource unit leads in its field

By Chuck Sullivan

For its sixth week, the resource unit of the Panola County Sheriff's Office has led in brain tumor cases. The unit began operations in January and is running smoothly.

The unit was established to provide specialized assistance in brain tumor cases in the county. It is staffed with experienced detectives and other professionals who are dedicated to providing the best possible service to those affected by brain tumors.

County budget planning starts

Panola County commissioners have a lengthy schedule tomorrow. Tonight, the board will meet with the county auditor to review the 1987-88 budget. The public hearings will be held for a normal annual budget. The board will have four meetings before the budget is adopted by year-end.

Although Panola 1986 is now history, the public has been waiting for the new budget. The board will have meetings tomorrow and next week. The board will have a meeting Thursday at 6 p.m. and Friday at 9 a.m. on the budget.
