Thursday, Scott Wells was back in the pool after all the kids had been swimming in it. The water was still warm and Scott could get in the hot water. He had been swimming in the pool for a while when he started to feel a little bit tired. He was taking a few breaks and trying to stay cool. He had been swimming for about an hour when he suddenly felt that something was wrong. He grabbed the edge of the pool and started to climb out. He was sweating and felt weak. He was holding his breath and trying to get air. He was so exhausted that he couldn't even breathe. He was about to pass out when he realized that he was going to need help.

Texas needs to find new income sources

BY MARTIN KROHN

For the energy industry, and particularly the state's large oil companies, Texas has benefited from high oil prices throughout the 1970s. Texas oil production is expected to decline in the 1980s, however, unless new sources of revenue can be found to support the industry. If new energy sources do not come online, Texas will suffer in the same way as other oil-producing states. In the Arizona Prescott Valley area, for example, new energy sources were developed to support the existing energy industry. It is believed that new energy sources may also be found in the future to support the existing Texas energy industry. Energy companies are trying to find new energy sources.

Taxes have played havoc with the budget, and we are forced to accept a slight increase in the price of our daily newspaper. The increase is necessary to cover the costs of printing and distribution.

The new price for morning delivery will be $0.25, and for afternoon delivery, it will be $0.20. We apologize for any inconvenience this may cause, but we believe it is necessary for the continued operation of our newspaper.

We appreciate your support and look forward to serving you daily.

Harris Chapel News

Taxes have been a major problem for many businesses in the area. One local business owner told us that they have had to raise their prices in order to cover the increased costs. This has led to some customers feeling frustrated, but the business owner emphasized that they are doing everything they can to keep prices reasonable.

Another business owner shared that they have had to make some difficult decisions in order to stay afloat. "We've had to lay off some employees and reduce our operating hours," they said. "But we're doing everything we can to keep going."

The community is feeling the effects of the tax increases, and many are wondering what can be done to alleviate the situation. Some are calling for increased government support, while others are advocating for tax reform.

Local businesses and community members are encouraged to come together and find solutions to this pressing issue.

Panola County Commissioners

One of the new year's resolutions for many people is to get back to basics. For the Panola County Commissioners, this means focusing on the core services of the county - roads, schools, and parks.

"We need to make sure that we are providing the basic services that our citizens expect," said Commissioner Joe Smith. "This means ensuring that our roads are well-maintained, our schools are of high quality, and our parks are accessible and enjoyable."

The commissioners have set a goal of increasing the budget for these core services, and they are working to find ways to fund this increase.
