Smart-mouth dog just ruins disaster day

By Ann Miller
There was a dog at the Library of Congress last week, a strange looking creature that had a funny way of walking. It was the end of the week and the dog seemed a bit different from the rest. It was as if the dog knew something was about to happen.

The dog was a small, barking creature, with small, fleshy ears that stood up at the slightest provocation. It had a thick coat of fur and a tail that wagged constantly. The dog was a bit of a mystery, and the librarians were curious about it.

As the dog approached the reference desk, the librarians couldn't help but notice its peculiar behavior. The dog seemed to be following them around, barking and sniffing at their feet. It was as if the dog knew something important.

The dog's presence seemed to have an impact on the library. The librarians were unable to concentrate, and the patrons were disturbed by the strange creature. It was as if the dog had brought a storm into the library.

The librarians quickly realized that the dog was a symbol of change. It was a sign that the library was about to undergo a transformation. They knew that the dog's presence was a prelude to something greater.

The librarians decided to give the dog a name. They called it "Libby." Libby was a symbol of hope and change, and the librarians knew that she would help them through the transition.

Libby's presence in the library was a reminder of the importance of change. It was a sign that the library was in the process of becoming something new and different. The librarians knew that they had to be ready for whatever changes were coming.

Libby was a part of the library, and the library was a part of her. She was a symbol of the library's commitment to change and growth. The librarians knew that they had to be strong and resilient, just like Libby.

As the dog walked away from the library, the librarians knew that they had a long road ahead of them. But they were ready for the challenge. They knew that Libby was a sign of hope and change, and they were determined to make the most of the opportunity.

The library was ready to embrace the future. Libby was a symbol of hope, and the librarians knew that they had to be ready for whatever changes were coming.

Dogs maul Center in scrimmage

By TED LEACH

Cartage mauling Center is expected to be the Friday, opening game of the football season Saturday night.

The Dogs are coming off a 33-7 victory over Castletberry last Saturday while the Center is still searching for a new coach.

Both teams have been preparing for the Friday night game at Panola Coliseum.

The Dogs are under the direction of new coach Mike Castletberry, who graduated in the spring. But for previous of description, running backs and players are out there.

Jones a running regular at Cartage for the past three years is a 5-10, 175-pound tailback. He is a senior and another game shaker for the Dogs.

Jones was not the only one shaker of the Cartage team.

Building coach Drayton White is with his team.

White is a forward thinking coach who would not want to lose.

Jones left early in the third quarter for the cartage team.

White is a forward thinking coach who would not want to lose.

Jones left early in the third quarter for the cartage team.

But give the Dogs their due: they did have some passes in the game against the Center line and made use of them.

The question that must be answered is: Will the Center be able to break away from the Dogs?

It should be a big season for both teams. Cartage, of course, with Jones and Castletberry, will be a much stronger team.

Center will be in the midst of a three-game losing streak, but they will be out to prove their worth.

The game will be played at the Panola Coliseum, a place where the Dogs have been successful in the past.

It is a game that is highly anticipated by fans and players alike.

Cartage defenders swarmed over Center's offense, making the Roughriders and yielding just six first downs in 32 plays.

Norwegian travels far to visit fallen hero's grave

By SUNDAY TIMES

In memory of her Norwegian hero, Mrs. M. A. Reeves of Danville, Indiana, has sent a package of roses to her daughter, Mrs. M. A. Johnson of Danville, Illinois. Mrs. Johnson is the only living relative of Mrs. Reeves' husband, Mr. M. A. Reeves, who was killed in World War II.

The roses were picked from a rose garden in Mrs. Reeves' home town of Danville, Illinois, and sent to her daughter in Danville, Indiana. Mrs. Johnson said she was touched by the gesture and felt it was a way to honor her husband's memory.

Mrs. Reeves' husband was killed in action during the Normandy invasion in 1944. She has remained a widow ever since.

Mrs. Johnson said she planned to plant the roses in memory of her husband and to keep them as a reminder of his sacrifice.

Rabies still presents a threat

Rabies is a viral disease that affects the central nervous system and is transmitted through contact with saliva or tissue from an infected animal. It is highly contagious and can be fatal if left untreated.

The disease is most commonly transmitted through the bite of an infected animal, such as a dog, cat, or fox. It can also be transmitted through the oral or respiratory secretions of an infected animal, such as through the bite of an infected bat.

Rabies is often associated with wild animals, such as raccoons, skunks, and bats. However, it can also be transmitted to domestic animals, such as dogs and cats, if they come into contact with an infected animal.

To prevent rabies, it is important to keep pets up to date on their rabies vaccinations and to avoid contact with wild animals. If you or your pet is bitten by an unknown animal, it is recommended that you seek medical attention immediately.
