The Texas Experience

Buffalo gave way to cowboy music

The buffalo had long since disappeared and the open range became a thing of the past when Texas music critic John Lomax, in 1928, bought a big cotton farm near Floresville. Lomax, who was no stranger to the world of Texas country music, was not yet the musicologist and folklorist, but a rancher and a man who loved the life of the open plains. And Lomax, who had been living in the area for several years, knew that the buffalo had once been a common sight in Texas. The land where he lived was once part of the range of the buffalo, and Lomax was determined to make this part of the land into a place where the buffalo could roam once again.

Lomax headed for the field and hired a group of men to go out and round up such buffalo as he could find. He wanted to create a buffalo herd that would be the envy of all other ranchers in the area. The men worked hard, and within a short time, they had rounded up enough buffalo to start the herd.

The buffalo were brought to Lomax's farm and were placed in an enclosed area. Here they were fed and cared for. As the months passed, the buffalo began to thrive. The herd soon grew to several hundred animals.

Lomax was pleased with the progress of his buffalo herd, and he made plans to continue to add more buffalo to the herd. He was determined to create a buffalo sanctuary where people could come to see the buffalo and learn about them.

In the end, Lomax's efforts paid off. The buffalo herd grew to several thousand animals, and Lomax's farm became a popular destination for people who wanted to see the buffalo. The buffalo became a part of the fabric of Lomax's life, and he was determined to keep the buffalo herd alive.

The history of Texas is full of stories like this, and the Texas experience is one that is still alive today. The buffalo of Lomax's day have given way to the cowboy music of today, but the spirit of the open range lives on.

A new process refines old tubs

Homemakers considering refinishing or reglazing bathtubs may be left with old, damaged tubs. Several options are available to homeowners in need of new bathtubs.

The process involves using a machine that grinds and refinishes the existing surface, leaving a smooth, durable finish. The new process refines the old tubs by removing the damaged surface and smoothing it out, making it look like a new one.

The parents are being informed by the school and the teachers are doing all they can to help. We hope that those who are sick will soon be back. We hope that those who are away will return soon.

I was glad to see Mr. and Mrs. McCleskey of Stamps. They were here for a short visit and I enjoyed their company. They plan to come back some time in the fall.

Dedication of the new Logan Avenue School was held today. The school was dedicated in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Crump. The dedication was attended by many friends and members of the community. Happiest guy in the world is a 'sack boy' at 84

By DOROTHY NEVILLE

In a small room at the Panola County Post office, a man is working on a computer, typing away on a keyboard. His name is Jack, and he is the 'sack boy.'

When asked if he enjoys his job, Jack responds with a big smile, "Yes, I do. I love coming here every day and seeing everyone."

Jack has worked at the Panola County Post for over 30 years. He started as a janitor and eventually worked his way up to the position of 'sack boy.'

He is responsible for sorting the newspapers and distributing them to the newspaper stands around town.

Jack says he enjoys meeting people and helping them with their mail. "I love interacting with people and making them feel welcome," he says.

Jack's job requires a lot of physical labor, but he says he doesn't mind. "It's not too bad, and it's good exercise."

When asked what he plans to do when he retires, Jack says he's not sure yet. "I'll probably continue to work here part-time, but I'll have more time to do other things," he says.

Despite his age, Jack is still very active and enjoys spending time with his family. He has two children and four grandchildren.

Jack's love for his job is evident in the way he interacts with everyone he meets. He is known for his friendly nature and his willingness to go the extra mile for his colleagues and customers.

"I'm just a simple guy," Jack says. "I'm happy doing what I do, and I hope I can keep doing it for a long time."
