Texan Janis Joplin was tragic voice of the 1960s

Music was a force that helped shape America in the 1960s, and for many young people it was the era of Janis Joplin. Joplin, born January 19, 1943, in Ypsilanti, Michigan, was a singer and musician who gained fame in the late 1960s and early 1970s. She started her career in the mid-1960s with the band Big Brother and the Holding Company, and later formed her own band, the Kozmic Blues Band.

Joplin's music was characterized by its raw, powerful vocals and its ability to convey deep emotions. She was known as a potent performer and a dynamic presence on stage. Her songs often touched on themes of love, loss, and heartbreak, and her music was a reflection of the counterculture of the 1960s.

In the summer of 1970, Joplin was performing at the Woodstock Music and Art Fair in Woodstock, New York. She died tragically on October 4, 1970, from a heroin overdose at the age of 27. Her death was a shock to the music world and to her fans around the world. She was posthumously inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1995.

Joplin's music continues to be celebrated and remembered, and she remains an iconic figure in the history of rock and roll. Her influence can be heard in the work of countless musicians who have followed in her footsteps. She was a trailblazer who paved the way for generations of female artists to come. Her legacy lives on, and her music continues to inspire and move people around the world.

Grass tetany may affect cattle herds in winter

Grass tetany is a condition that can affect cattle herds in winter due to the lack of calcium in their diet. It can lead to muscle spasms and weakness, which can be fatal if not treated. Farmers should monitor their herds for signs of this condition and ensure they have access to a source of high calcium feed or other calcium supplements.

First Things First

By Tish Begg

I am not too stout on the comics except for "Peanuts," but I can see every time I look out the window there is that pretty little girl who has brought a slightly less than appealing scene to my attention. The reason for her presence is that she is looking at her own reflection in the window. That's not a very good thing. It's like looking at your own reflection in the window. You see yourself as better than you really are.
