The Contingency Plan

For a school system like the Carthage Independent School District that has a large number of high school students, it is important to have a contingency plan in place. The plan should cover various scenarios such as a fire, a natural disaster, or a power outage. The plan should include procedures for notifying parents and students, communicating with staff, and ensuring the safety of all students. It should also include procedures for making up missed school days. The plan should be reviewed and updated regularly to ensure its effectiveness. Overall, a good contingency plan can help to ensure a safe and successful school environment for all students.

Christmas in 1880s remembered by 104-year-old

By Dorothy Head

Staff writer

A 104-year-old resident of Tallulah and former resident of Panola County, Mrs. Alice Brooks, tells the story of Christmas in 1880s.

"There were no Christmas trees then," said Mrs. Brooks. "Our families would come together and sing carols on Christmas Eve. We would exchange gifts and enjoy a special meal."

Mrs. Brooks also remembers the tradition of making sugar cookies and other holiday treats.

"We would bake cookies and hang them on our trees," she said. "The children would then decorate the trees with ribbons and bows."

Alligator tail may be a delicate fish, rather close to a snake. The catch in the United States is very limited, but there are several alligator ranches in Florida where alligators are raised for their skin. The meat is considered to be a delicacy by some people, but it is also known to be a source of disease in some areas. The alligator is a reptile and is related to the crocodile. It is a dangerous animal and should be handled with care.
