Simmons believes PGH may break even even in 1987

Despite numerous problems that have kept above average prices for the past few years, Simmons believes his company will break even in 1987.

The company's 1987 budget anticipates a slight growth in the number of patients and an overall increase in sales. The company's expenses, however, are expected to increase by $35,000, primarily due to the purchase of new equipment.

Simmons said the company's plan is to continue its policy of cutting costs and increasing efficiency. The company has already taken steps to reduce expenses, such as by cutting back on unnecessary advertising and by negotiating lower rates with suppliers.

Bullock warns of pitfalls in imposition of new tax

Bullock, a former state legislator, warns against the imposition of new taxes. He argues that such taxes will be difficult to implement and that they will likely lead to increased government spending.

"It's a mistake to impose new taxes," Bullock said. "We need to find other ways to increase revenue, such as by cutting government waste and inefficiency. Only then can we truly say that the state's finances are in order."

Texas attracts most Sunbelt immigrants

The "Sunbelt" is the movement of people from the colder, more northerly parts of the United States to the warmer, more southerly regions, which was particularly pronounced during the 1970s and 1980s. Texas, in particular, became a major hub for this movement due to its warm climate, abundant job opportunities, and lower cost of living compared to more northerly states.

The process by which this migration occurred is known as "the Texas phenomenon," which refers to the large influx of people moving to Texas from other parts of the United States. This migration was not only due to the state's economic growth and job opportunities, but also to its cultural and social factors, such as the lower cost of living and more relaxed lifestyle.

The "Texas phenomenon" has been a major factor in the state's economic growth and development, with the influx of people helping to fuel the state's economy and supporting its growth. The state's population growth has been particularly pronounced in recent decades, with the state's population increasing significantly.

Farming can be profitable

By Stanold Conley

"Farming can be profitable, but it requires hard work and dedication," says farmer John Smith. "You have to be willing to put in the time and effort to make it successful." Smith has been farming for over 20 years and has seen the ups and downs of the industry. "It's not easy, but it can be very rewarding," he says.

According to a report made by Smith, the average farmer in the region makes $50,000 per year. However, this can vary greatly depending on the size of the farm and the types of crops grown.

"I've seen some farmers make over $100,000 in a single year," says Smith. "But others struggle to make ends meet." Smith attributes the variability in income to factors such as weather, market demand, and competition.

"The key is to be adaptable and versatile," he says. "You have to be willing to try new things and be open to change." Smith has seen firsthand how quickly the market can change, and he believes that farmers who are able to adapt are more likely to succeed.

"In the end, it's all about passion," says Smith. "If you love what you do, it will show in your work." He encourages others to consider farming as a career, but warns that it is not for everyone.

"It's a lot of hard work," he says. "But for those who are willing to put in the time and effort, it can be very rewarding."

John, Rita Will show vestments they wear as Methodist ministers

There has been some confusion about the vestments that John and Rita Will wear when they officiate at church services. John will be wearing a white cassock and a pink stole, while Rita will be wearing a red cassock and a white stole. The vestments are traditional for Methodist ministers, and they are worn to symbolize their role in the church.
