Editorial

Good work by all

The twelve clerks who served on the Grand Jury this past week probably have little idea of how much they have contributed to revealing the existence of 28 criminal cases, and returning four true bills on one of them in the course of their work. Each grand juror, in that sworn position, serves the public interest by providing a fair and just trial for those accused. The grand jury is an important and essential part of our criminal justice system.

Young being led by adults

One of the most important aspects of the grand jury is its role in investigating allegations of misconduct by public officials. The grand jury's ability to conduct thorough investigations is key to holding accountable those who are charged with crimes.

Something to consider

There are several reasons why the grand jury may be more effective than the prosecutor's office in investigating certain types of cases. First, the grand jury is not bound by the same rules of evidence as the prosecutor's office. This means that the grand jury can gather evidence that may not be admissible in court. Second, the grand jury is not bound by the same rules of privacy as the prosecutor's office. This means that the grand jury can investigate cases that may be sensitive or controversial.

Kickbacks in foreign aid

Anthony Harrison Washington, D.C.

The United States has been accused of kickbacks in foreign aid. While the issue is not new, it is receiving renewed attention.

 kickedbacks in foreign aid

In a recent investigation, the U.S. Department of Justice found that the United States government had paid kickbacks to foreign officials in order to secure contracts for American companies.

War on Drugs seeks community involvement

Angela McDonald, co-chairperson of the War on Drugs Committee, explained at the Monday meeting and presented ideas about the War on Drugs Committee. Community members were encouraged to attend the monthly meeting and to get involved in the committee.

Card of thanks

The family of Elder McDonald cannot put into words the love and support they received during the time of their loved one's illness. Elder McDonald was a devoted husband and father. To show his family how much they are loved and appreciated, his community organized a vigil in his honor. Elder McDonald was instrumental in his community and an inspiration to those around him. He will be deeply missed.
