County woman, 87, dies when home burns

By Sheedee Jernery

An elderly Panola County woman died in a small house fire Monday morning. The woman identified as Mrs. B. D. Smith, was found dead in the small house fire Monday morning in the town of Magnolia. The body was discovered by a deputy sheriff who responded to the scene of the fire. The cause of death was determined to be smoke inhalation. The woman was alone in the house when the fire started. The fire was contained to the room where she was located. The fire was started by a candle that was left unattended. The house was completely destroyed by the fire. The woman identified as Mrs. B. D. Smith, was a long-time resident of Magnolia. The family has been notified. A memorial service will be held on Wednesday at 2:00 p.m. at the Magnolia Community Church. The family is being assisted by the John W. Smith Funeral Home of Magnolia.

Here I am again, a bit behind the times, with my long awaited and eagerly awaited Christmas letter. I must apologize for the delay, but it's not for lack of material. My husband and I have been enjoying the Christmas spirit, and we're looking forward to spending it with our family and friends. We've been baking cookies, making gingerbread houses, and crafting homemade gifts. I hope you're all enjoying the holiday season as well.

The past year has been... well, let's just say it's been interesting. We've had our fair share of challenges, but we've also had many happy moments. I'm grateful for the support of my family and friends, and I'm looking forward to another year of growth and learning.

If you have any updates or news to share, please feel free to let me know. I always enjoy hearing from you.

Happy Holidays!

Mrs. Clos Baker

PETROLEUM OIL

Petroleum oil is necessary

Petroleum oil is not only essential to the operations of many vehicles, but it is also a critical component of the global energy mix. The demand for petroleum oil is increasing steadily, driven by population growth and economic development in many countries. The production of petroleum oil is concentrated in a small number of countries, and the prices of petroleum oil can be volatile. This can have significant impacts on the global economy and on the environment.

The production of petroleum oil is a complex process that involves the extraction of crude oil from underground reservoirs, the refining of crude oil into different products, and the distribution of those products to consumers. The refining process is a crucial step in the production of petroleum oil, as it allows the extraction of valuable products such as gasoline, diesel fuel, and heating oil. The distribution of petroleum oil is also a complex process, as it involves the transportation of products from refineries to storage facilities and from there to retail outlets.

Petroleum oil is not only used as a fuel in vehicles, but it is also used in the production of many other products, including plastics, rubber, and pharmaceuticals. The production of these products relies on the availability of petroleum oil, and the prices of petroleum oil can have significant impacts on the production costs of these other products.

The demand for petroleum oil is expected to continue to increase in the coming years, driven by growth in population and economic activity. This will put additional pressure on the global petroleum oil market, and it will be important to ensure that the market is able to meet the demands of consumers while also protecting the environment.

You've seen the movie; now meet the gun...

It's Top Gun in flesh, not glorious technicolor!

By Dorothy Newton

Debbie Depper, heartthrob of the new "Top Gun" movie, has been through the hoop grinder at the United States Naval Academy...she's been through the mean, the sting of the training boot camp. She's been through the drill, the solitary confinement, the solitary confinement, the solitary confinement. She's been through the burn, the burn, the burn. She's been through the pain, the pain, the pain. She's been through the...well, you get the picture.

Debbie Depper, who won the part of the show's leading man, was scoured from the decks of the USS Kitty Hawk. Her performance was so realistic that they had to make a few changes for the film. The most significant change was the addition of a new character, the character of a military man who is always on the lookout for the next big thing.

Debbie Depper, who is now a member of the cast of "Top Gun," says that she was not chosen for the part because of her looks, but because she was the best actress for the role. "I was chosen for the part because I could bring a sense of realism and believability to the character," she says. "I have always been a fan of the show, and I was thrilled to be able to bring that respect to my performance."
