Panola County jail nears completion

By Tommy Kelley

Construction of the new Panola County jail is nearing completion, and the officers are preparing to move into the new facility. The new jail will provide more space for inmates and improved living conditions compared to the old facility. The new jail is expected to be fully operational by the end of the month.

The new jail is located on the outskirts of the city, and the officers are currently moving into the new facility. The jail will have a capacity of 200 inmates, and the officers are preparing for the move. The new facility will feature modern living conditions, including air conditioning and heating, and will provide space for officers to work and live.

The new jail is part of a larger plan to improve the county's correctional system. The county has been working on this project for several years, and the new jail is a significant step towards achieving that goal.

The new jail will also feature a new intake facility, which will help streamline the booking process for inmates. The intake facility will have a capacity of 50 inmates and will feature modern technology to improve efficiency.

Overall, the new jail is a significant improvement over the old facility, and the officers are looking forward to moving into the new facility.

Tax case may cost state millions

A tax case may cost the state millions of dollars. The case involves a property owner who failed to pay taxes on their property, and as a result, the state is now seeking to recoup the lost revenue. The case is currently in court, and a decision is expected in the near future. The state is urging all property owners to pay their taxes on time to avoid similar situations in the future.
Editorial

Is bottle bill needed?

A bill before the legislature to establish a bottle deposit system on beverage containers is newsworthy because it is a step towards reducing litter and recycling. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Linda Tuell, would require retailers to charge a deposit on beverage containers and refund the deposit when the containers are returned.

The bottle bill is not a new idea. Similar laws have been in place in other states for years. The research shows that deposit systems work. They reduce litter and encourage recycling. The New York State bottle bill, for example, has been in place since 1971 and has been a model for similar legislation in other states.

The bottle bill is not without its critics. Some argue that it will lead to an increase in the price of beverages, which could be a burden on low-income families. Others worry that the system will be too cumbersome for retailers to manage.

But the benefits of the bottle bill outweigh the concerns. It is time for the Texas Legislature to pass a bottle bill and join the many other states that have already done so. The bottle bill is a common sense solution to a common problem.

Report from Leningrad...

Neals say OK to visit, but watch that camera

By Joyce McManus

Staff Writer

When Ted and John Neal went to Leningrad last summer, they tried to be "friendly" tourists. They bought scarves and postcards, but no souvenirs - because before they left for Russia, they'd read of tourists being harassed and having their belongings taken away. "We're not buying anything," John said. "We're not going to buy anything." But when they arrived in Leningrad, nothing happened. They bought scarves and postcards, but no souvenirs. "We're not going to buy anything," John said. "We're not going to buy anything."

Panola Watchman

Cold weather can be uncomfortable and uncomfortable, but there are ways to keep warm without feeling hot under the collar. One solution is to wear layers, allowing you to add or remove clothing as needed.

Another option is to use electric blankets or throws, which can be turned on when you need heat and turned off when you feel too warm. Additionally, using an electric space heater can be effective, especially if you choose one that has a thermostat to control the temperature.

Remember to stay hydrated and dress appropriately to help prevent the symptoms of cold and flu. Enjoy your winter season without feeling "Hot under the collar."
