Should Gaddy be paid?

Monday, when the County Commissioners Court decided on the matter of whether or not to pay the county prosecutor, Judge Charles "Butch" Gaddy, an additional salary, it was a close vote. (See story on Page 1.)

The court's decision was a clear indication of the controversy surrounding the issue. The debate over Gaddy's compensation highlights the tension between the executive and legislative branches of government.

The county judge, who is elected by the voters, has a fiduciary duty to act in the best interest of the citizens. However, the commissioners court, acting as a legislative body, has a responsibility to provide funding for essential services.

The decision to pay Gaddy an additional salary reflects the commissioners' belief that his role as county prosecutor is critical to the county's operations. As such, they determined that the extra compensation is justified.

On the other hand, some members of the court may have had concerns about the financial implications of this decision. The additional salary would add to the county's expenses, and this could have been a factor in their decision-making process.

In conclusion, the decision to pay Gaddy an additional salary was a complex one, involving considerations of both the county judge's responsibilities and the commissioners' financial obligations. The outcome of the vote underscores the importance of transparency and accountability in the decision-making process.

Long distance valentine

Dear Editor,

On Valentine's Day, Mrs. Freda, who lives in Texas, wrote a love letter to her husband, Mr. William, who lives in Colorado. She ended her letter with a long-distance kiss. Mr. William, who lives in Texas, sent a postcard to his wife on the same day. He wrote, "I love you and remember our wedding day." He also drew a heart on the postcard.

The long journey of love between Mrs. Freda and Mr. William is a testament to the power of love and the lengths people will go to express their feelings. The long-distance romance is a source of inspiration for many couples around the world.

The story of Mrs. Freda and Mr. William is a reminder that love knows no boundaries. Regardless of the distance, true love can overcome any obstacle. Their love story is a shining example of the strength and durability of human connection.

Answer: Yes, you can make your anniversary even more memorable by planning a special event. You can make it a surprise and invite your family and friends to join in the fun. You can also consider getting a gift for your daughter or planning a special activity, such as a trip to a new place or a day at the spa. DeBerry to hold sock-hop for accident victim

By Tom Kelle

When Brandi Parker, 12, of the DeBerry school district, was hit and killed by a car on Friday, her family, teachers, and friends were devastated. The accident occurred in a school zone, and many say it could have been prevented if drivers had been more cautious.

"She was such a bright light in our community," said her cousin, Kelly Johnson. "She was always smiling and had a way of making everyone feel welcome."

The school district has organized a sock-hop to honor Brandi and raise money for her family. The event will be held at the DeBerry High School on Saturday night. "Brandy would have loved it," said her sister, Sarah Parker. "She loved music and dancing, and she would have had so much fun there."

Workers with the East Texas Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Council are seeking church and social agency involvement in the community's needs.

In a working lunch at the First Presbyterian Church in Carthage, Marya Parker, director of client services for the council, presented an overview of the council's needs and invited the audience to consider ways they could become involved.

"We're looking for churches and social agencies to work with us to meet the needs of our clients," Parker said. "We need people who are willing to listen and offer their support."

Parker said the council is looking for volunteers to help with various tasks, such as providing transportation, assisting with food and clothing donations, and helping with other community service projects.
